Tribridge's Public Sector Work Falls In Line with Obama's Open Government Plan

TAMPA, Fla. (Dec. 21, 2009) – Tribridge, (www.tribridge.com) a leading Public Sector IT Services firm, offers municipalities and organizations the necessary solutions to quickly adopt the transparency requirements as directed by the new Open Government Directive announced by the Obama Administration on Dec. 8, 2009.

According to www.whitehouse.gov, the directive was sent to the head of every federal department and agency, instructing the agencies to take specific actions to open operations to the public. As stated on the website: "The three principles of transparency, participation, and collaboration are at the heart of this directive."

Tribridge is able to help organizations comply with the new transparency requirements with real-time access to information that can be deployed both internally and to the public, such as key information on how grants are being spent, agency spending vs. budget, number of employees, and number and type of infrastructure issue calls.

"Our public sector practice will help leverage current technology to not only comply with these new requirements, but lead the way," said Josh Jaquish, Tribridge Public Sector Practice Leader.

Tribridge has completed projects with entities such as North Carolina Department of Crime Control & Public Safety, City of Plantation (Fla.), City of Rochester (N.Y.) and Des Moines Area Regional Transit (Iowa). Most recently, Tribridge was awarded a State of Florida IT Services Contract and is now a qualified vendor in the State of Florida.
